

Delta Global Agriculture Portfolio

SERIES 8

UNIT INVESTMENT TRUSTS

Investment Objective and Principal Investment Strategy

The Delta Global Agriculture Portfolio, Series 8 ("Trust") seeks to maximize total return primarily through capital appreciation. The Trust consists of 21 securities of companies headquartered in eleven countries on five continents (North America, South America, Europe, Asia and Australia) selected by Claymore, with the assistance of Delta Global Advisors, Inc. ("Delta Global"), that may appreciate in value, especially in an environment of rising agricultural commodity prices. These commodities include, but are not limited to, corn, soybeans, wheat, sugar, palm oil, cotton, oats and fruit. The Trust portfolio also has exposure to companies that profit from the use of edible oils as bio-fuels. In addition, the Trust invests in companies that help farmers increase crop yields and that benefit from the trading of agricultural commodities. The Sponsor has selected Delta Global to serve as the Trust's portfolio consultant. The portfolio consultant is responsible for assisting the Sponsor with the selection of the Trust's portfolio and providing ongoing support related to the securities in the portfolio.

Security Selection

The Sponsor has selected securities that derive their main source of revenue from the growing, selling, processing and/or trading of a broad spectrum of agricultural commodities. The Trust portfolio is globally diversified with stocks of companies that Delta Global identified as likely to benefit from a rise in agricultural products. The selection process is fundamental in nature, with a proprietary scoring system based primarily on earnings, revenue growth and, when possible, historical dividend yields.

Making the Case for Agricultural Stocks

Agricultural stocks and their underlying commodities have appreciated sharply since December of last year, coinciding with the rise in oil prices. The decline in the value of the U.S. dollar has led to increased exports of soft commodities, thereby supporting their prices. Looking ahead, global demand for fertilizer is expected to rise over the next several years as credit to farmers becomes more readily available and attractive commodity prices encourage farmers to increase crop production.¹ In addition, the U.S.D.A. projects corn, soybean, and wheat production for the 2009/10 crop year to reach a record 18.14 billion bushels – 3 percent higher than the previous year and 2 percent above the previous record set in 2007/08. Exports of these commodities are also expected to increase by 4 percent to 4.32 billion bushels, due in part to strong demand from China.²

Also, as more corn and soybeans are diverted to biofuel consumption, the Sponsor and Delta Global further believe forces for a sustained rise in agricultural commodities prices seem to be in place. According to U.S.D.A. Agricultural Projections to 2018 from February 2009: "Long-run developments for global agriculture reflect continued demand for biofuels, particularly in the United States and the European Union (EU). Although increases in corn-based ethanol production in the United States are projected to slow, ethanol demand remains high and affects production, use, and prices of farm commodities throughout the sector. Expansion of biodiesel use in the EU raises demand for vegetable oils in global markets. Further, once the economies recover from the current slowdown, steady economic gains support increases in consumption, trade, and prices."

RISK CONSIDERATIONS As with all investments, you may lose some or all of your investment in the Trust. No assurance can be given that the Trust's investment objective will be achieved. The Trust also might not perform as well as you expect. This can happen for reasons such as these: Securities prices can be volatile. The value of your investment may fall over time. Market value fluctuates in response to various factors. These can include stock market movements, purchases or sales of securities by the Trust, government policies, litigation, and changes in interest rates, inflation, the financial condition of the securities' issuer or even perceptions of the issuer. Units of the Trust are not deposits of any bank and are not insured or guaranteed by the Federal Deposit Insurance Corporation or any other government agency. Due to the current state of the economy, the value of the securities held by the Trust may be subject to steep declines or increased volatility due to changes in performance or perception of the issuers. In the last year, economic activity has declined across all sectors of the economy, and the United States is experiencing increased unemployment. The current economic crisis has affected the global economy with European and Asian markets also suffering historic losses. Extraordinary steps have been taken by the governments of several leading economic countries to combat the economic crisis; however, the impact of these measures is not yet known and cannot be predicted. Share prices or dividend rates on the securities in the Trust may decline during the life of the Trust. There is no guarantee that the issuers of the securities will declare dividends in the future and, if declared, whether they will remain at current levels or increase over time. The Trust invests in foreign securities and American Depositary Receipts ("ADRs"). The Trust's investment in foreign securities and ADRs presents additional risk. ADRs are issued by a bank or trust company to evidence ownership of underlying

RISK CONSIDERATIONS (CONTINUED) securities issued by foreign corporations. Foreign risk is the risk that foreign securities will be more volatile than U.S. securities due to such factors as adverse economic, currency, political, social or regulatory developments in a country, including government seizure of assets, excessive taxation, limitations on the use or transfer of assets, the lack of liquidity or regulatory controls with respect to certain industries or differing legal and/or accounting standards. The Trust invests in companies located in countries with emerging markets. These markets are generally more volatile than in countries with more mature economies.

The Trust includes securities issued by companies headquartered or incorporated in countries considered to be emerging markets. Emerging markets are generally defined as countries with low per capita income in the initial stages of their industrialization cycles. Risks of investing in developing or emerging countries include the possibility of investment and trading limitations, liquidity concerns, delays and disruptions in settlement transactions, political uncertainties and dependence on international trade and development assistance. Companies headquartered in emerging market countries may be exposed to greater volatility and market risk. The Trust may invest in companies that are considered to be passive foreign investment companies ("PFICs"). In general, PFICs are certain non-U.S. corporations that receive at least 75% of their annual gross income from passive sources (such as interest, dividends, certain rents and royalties or capital gains) or that hold at least 50% of their assets in investments producing such passive income. As a result of an investment in PFICs, the Trust could be subject to U.S. federal income tax and additional interest charges on gains and certain distributions with respect to those equity interests, even if all the income or gain is distributed to its unitholders in a timely manner. The Trust will not be able to pass through to its unitholders any credit or deduction for such taxes. The Trust includes securities whose value is dependent on currency exchange rates. The U.S. dollar value of these securities will vary with fluctuations in foreign exchange rates. Most foreign currencies have fluctuated widely in value against the U.S. dollar for various economic and political reasons such as the activity level of large international commercial banks, various central banks, speculators, hedge funds and other buyers and sellers of foreign currencies. The Trust invests in securities of companies in the agribusiness industry. Companies involved in the agribusiness industry are subject to numerous risks, including cyclicalities of revenues and earnings, economic recession, currency fluctuations, changing consumer tastes, extensive competition, weather conditions, quotas, product liability litigation and governmental regulation and subsidies. Generally, the agribusiness industry is affected by the economic health of consumers. A weak economy and its effect on consumer spending would adversely affect agribusiness companies. The Trust includes securities of companies in the consumer staples sector. General risks of companies in the consumer staples sector include cyclicalities of revenues and earnings, economic recession, currency fluctuations, changing consumer tastes, extensive competition, product liability litigation and increased government regulation. A weak economy and its effect on consumer spending would adversely affect consumer staples companies. The Trust invests in securities of companies in the basic materials sector. General risks of companies in the basic materials sector include the general state of the economy, consolidation, domestic and international politics and excess capacity. In addition, basic materials companies may also be significantly affected by volatility of commodity prices, import controls, worldwide competition, liability for environmental damage, depletion of resources, and mandated expenditures for safety and pollution control devices. The Trust invests in securities issued by small-capitalization and mid-capitalization companies. These securities customarily involve more investment risk than securities of larger capitalization companies. Small-capitalization and mid-capitalization companies may have limited product lines, markets or financial resources and may be more vulnerable to adverse general market or economic developments. Inflation may lead to a decrease in the value of assets or income from investments. The Sponsor does not actively manage the portfolio. The Trust will generally hold, and may continue to buy, the same securities even though a security's outlook, market value or yield may have changed. Please see the Trust prospectus for more complete risk information.

UITs are fixed and not actively managed. An investment in this fixed portfolio should be made with an understanding of the risks involved with owning various types of investments. Industry predictions may not materialize and securities selected for the Trust may not participate in overall industry growth, if any. There is no guarantee that the portfolio will achieve its investment objective. Units, when redeemed, may be worth more or less than their original purchase price.

This UIT is part of a long-term strategy, and investors should consider their ability to invest in successive portfolios, if available, at the applicable sales charge. There are tax consequences associated with an investment from one series to the next. Investors should consult their tax advisor to determine tax consequences associated with an investment from one portfolio to the next. Units of the portfolio may be well suited for purchase by Individual Retirement Accounts or other qualified retirement plans. Consult an attorney or tax advisor regarding tax consequences associated with the purchase of units. Claymore Securities, Inc. does not offer tax advice.
